‘THE NATURE OF HUMAN BEINGS AND
THE QUESTION OF THEIR ULTIMATE ORIGIN’

When complex issues arise, involving serious debate, sound intellectual exchange and discussion can prove enlightening and helpful. The nature of human beings and the question of their ultimate origin is one such consideration, with important implications for all areas of learning. Can science in dialogue with philosophy and theology map a more progressive route for reflecting upon such matters? Three eminent thinkers with expertise in their own fields have kindly agreed to explore the above topic with a view to determining whether worthwhile resolutions may be possible as a consequence.

Tickets for the Lecture may be purchased for £5 each
